CAPITALIZING ON ENVIRONMENTAL INJUSTICE

WITH

DANIEL FABER

AUTHOR PRESENTATION
FOLLOWED BY A DISCUSSION &
WINE & CHEESE-STYLE RECEPTION

On the faculty of Northeastern University, Daniel Faber has studied environmental injustice and called attention to radical inequalities. For example, in 2001, Faber found that "If you live in a community of color in Massachusetts, for example, the chances are 19 times higher that you live in one of the 25 most environmentally-burdened communities in the state." He is also an expert on corporate influence over public policy.

Capitalizing on Environmental Injustice is a comprehensive assessment of the environmental justice movement, examining the achievements and challenges confronting the movement, along with an emphasis on new strategies of environmental problem-solving and innovations in environmental policy.
